On Weekend Trip to Ankara

Kissinger Will Try Anew For a Cyprus Settlement

By Murrey Marder ROME, Nov. 4 (WP).—Secretary of State Henry Kissinger will seek to reopen negotiations on the Greek-Turkish Cyprus crisis this weekend in Ankara after a quick tour of the Middle

As Mr. Kissinger traveled today from Romania to Yugoslavia to Rome, it was announced that he will visit the Turkish capital Friday and Saturday after his flying visits to Egypt, Jordan, Saudi Arabia and Israel.

This jammed schedule thrusts Mr. Kissinger into a double diplomatic mission this week to try to repair damage to his person-alized negotiating strategy. The Ford administration faces deadline of Dec. 10 imposed by Congress to produce evidence of "substantial progress" toward re-moving Turkish military forces from Cyprus, a development that would prevent a complete ban on American military aid to Congress voted that threat to arms for Turkey after President Ford twice vetoed similar versions of the penalty. Mr. Kissinger is still bridling over that challenge to his negotiating authority but it is adamantly denied in the Kissinger party that the trip to Ankara is simply "eyewash" to placate Congress.

Contact With Athens Instead, it is said that Mr. Kissinger is now planning negotiating explorations in Turkey which would have undertaken even if Congress had not moved directly to impose its own deadlines. Mr. Kissinger is reported to have been "in detailed contact" with the Greek government about his trip to Turkey this weekend. The Athens government of Premier Constantine Caramanlis has been publicly de-manding a total withdrawal of some 40,000 Turkish troops who invaded Cyprus in July and August following the overthrow of Cypriot President Makarios. Archbishop Makarlos was top-pled in a plot supported by Greece's previous military dictatorship, which itself fell from ministration to prevent the Turkish invasion of Cyprus, launched in the name of protecting the Turkish-Cypriot minority against the Greek-Cypriot majority, produced a revolt in Congress. It voted to ber any further ship-ment of American-supplied Turkish arms to Cyprus, to insist on Turkey's observance of the Cyprus cease-fire and to cut off American arms aid to Turkey even before Dec. 10 if Turkey increases its forces on the Mediterranean island, just 40 miles off the Turkish coast.

Mr. Kissinger's position is that these limitations, imposed on the ground that Turkish arms were sent to Cyprus in violation of American law, ignore what he and many other U.S. strategists see as overriding American interests in the eastern Mediterranean If the present heightened Arab-

Israeli tension resulting from decisions at the Arab summit meeting at Rabat last week should produce a new war in the Middle est, these strategists maintain,

Turkey, a member of the North the visit to Ankara by Mr. Kis Atlantic alliance, would be vital to American security interests in the region. Accordingly, these strategists say, this is no time to provoke the sensitivities of Turkey, where the government is in the process of reorganization

Hope Expressed by Clerides NICOSIA, Nov. 4 (AP).—Acting Cyprus President Glafkos Clerides today expressed the hope that singer on Friday might help the Cypriot refugees to return to their homes.

Mr. Clerides's statement, issued by the government information office increased speculation that Mr. Kissinger's visit would result in a Turkish gesture to allow some of the 200,000 Greek Cypriot refugees to return to their homes in the Turkish-oc-cupied part of the island.

Schlesinger Reassures Bonn On U.S. Troops in Germany

BONN, Nov. 4 (AF).—Defense Secretary James Schlesinger said today that there would be "neither an increase nor a reduction of U.S. troops in Germany," but rather a shift in the ratio of combat to support forces. Mr. Schlesinger's comments came after a meeting with Georg Leber, the West German Defense

Mr. Schlesinger told newsmen that he and Mr. Leber had discussed possible sites for the stationing of two U.S. Army brigades in Germany and future ministerial guidance for NATO. Ratio Shift -

The two new brigades would be part of the ratio shift, in which some 18,000 support troops and their dependents would be with-drawn from West Germany over the next two years and be replaced by an equivalent mumber of combat soldiers without dependents.

One of the brigades would be stationed in central Germany, at Wildflecken, near the Czecho-slovak border, or at Wieshaden

Air Force base, Wiesbaden, which would be farther from the initial line of possible conflict, appears to be the first choice of tacticians here. The second new brigade possibly would be stationed in northern Germany, detached from the bulk of American forces in the south.

The northern brigade would pose two problems one logistical and the other political New Supply Lines

New lines of supply would have to be set up to support the northern brigade in an area which long has been the domain of British Dutch, Belgian and West German forces.

Politically, the Americans will want to avoid the impression that the new brigade obviates the need for a proportionate number of troops that the British, Belens and Dutch now have stationed in the area. Force-reduction movements are under way in the three countries. The ratio changes would leave

U.S. troop strength in West Germany at about 200,000, Mr. Schlesinger said. He added that there were no plans at this time to change the nuclear equipment in Germany. The Defense Department, however, is committed to reviewing the need for maintaining its present full nuclear arsenal in Western Europe, estimated at 7,000 warheads.

Confers With Schmidt

Later in the day, Mr. Schlesinger met with Chancellor Helmut Schmidt. A German Defense Ministry spokesman said that the two men discussed questions of security within the Atlantic alliance, with special reference to the current status of the world's economy. U.S. Ambassador Martin Hillenbrand participated in the talks. A spokesman for Mr. Schlesinger said that the defense secretary's two-and-a-half day visit —his first to West Germany—was in response to a "long-standing

In Bihar State Political Protests

Indian Police Gas and Club Demonstrators

PATNA, India, Nov. 4 (AP).-Police today fired tear-gas grenades and thrashed anti-government demonstrators with bamboo staves in an attempt to quell a growing political uprising led by Jayaprakash Narayan, a 72-yearold disciple of independence leader Mahatma Gandhi.

Mr. Narayan, head of a seven-LUANDA Angola, Nov. 4

One of a policeman's blows during a club charge glanced off Mr. Narayan, who is still weak from a prostate operation a few months ago. He fell down and lay on the pavement with smoke from tear gas hanging around

"I was never manhandled like this by the British," said Mr. Narayan, who often went to fail during Gandhi's independence campaign in the 1930s and 1940s. "But I'm happy," he said later, "because we were successful today. We held our historic march despite every possible obstacle." The Bihar state government, which is ruled by Mrs. Gandhi's Congress party, tried to prevent the march, designed to signal the start of an intensified campaign to force the resignation of the state's ministers.

Tens of thousands of people were barred from entering Patna, the state capital 600 miles from New Delhi. Train, bus and ferryboat runs were canceled. By conservative estimates, thousands of Mr. Narayan's followers were arrested and detained in newly opened jail camps before they could leave their home districts. One is that powerful forces over which man seems to have little immediate control have had a role in bringing about the food crisis. Global population is growing at a rate of 70 million a year. Not much can be done to slow it down before the year 2000, when the world's population will be around 6.5 billion people, instead of the present 3.8 billion. The weather was catastrophical-

Between 1971 and 1972, annual world output actually declined by 35 million tons. This year's output is also expected to be lower than the 1.265 billion tons produced in 1973, mainly because of poor weather.

Nature Not Alone

Yet if the delegates to the United Nations-sponsored conference are to make any headway, they will have to accept one other truth: Nature alone was not responsible for the problem.

Decisions—and procrastination by political leaders in dozens of countries have contributed to the equiring political courage and a new level of maturity must be made if there are to be improve-

At the Rome conference, representatives of poor countries will almost certainly engage in ritual condemnation of the policies of the rich. They will demand more food assistance, more technical aid, more credit. There is instice in that, because there is no more blatant example of global inequalities than the huge food surpluses in wealthy nations and the deficits in poor ones.

But the world food situation is.

"Disincentives" to increased agricultural production exist in many countries. Farmers have been placed at the end of the line in eligibility for bank credits for investment in agriculture.

Priorities Elsewhere

The UN's Food and Agriculture Organization estimates that the average small farmer in South Asia, unable to obtain adequate credit, spends about $6 a hectare (2,47 acres) on his crop instead of the $20 to $80 needed to achieve maximum yields through the use of new seeds, pesticides and fertilizers. Industrial development, the tourist business and military needs have often been assigned a higher priority than agricultural India made dramatic gains in food production in the 1960s and experts believe that the outlook for that country is not hopeless. Yet few observers believe that the Indian government has done all it could to increase farm pro-

In the last 12 years, India has financed two major wars with Pakistan as well as the development of nuclear devices. India this year is facing a food deficit

Many aspects of the pres food crists are still murky. Not enough is known by policy makers about true conditions in the majority of countries where hunger and malnutrition are said to be widespread. All indications are that famine is already a reality in a number of areas in Africa and South Asia, but the statistics Government decisions by rich

It is an ironic comment on global interdependence that the draining away of the world's grain reserves in 1972 can be traced, in part, to riots by Polish workers on the Baltic coast in December, 1970. The riots were about high-priced low-quality

The Soviet Union took notice. Concerned about its own domestic tranquility, it decided to improve the diet of its population by increasing the component of grainfed red meat. After a bad harvest in 1972, Moscow bought grain from the United States and other producers on an unprecedented scale, rather than reduce Soviet livestock herds. Had the Soviet government chosen an opposite alternative—austerity—grain supplies now might be ample and prices might be lower.

Another example of the role that governments play was the cutback ordered on the cultiva-tion of wheat because of low world prices and a seemingly inexhaustible surplus in the late 1960s. Between 1968 and 1970, the combined wheat acreage of the United States, Canada, Australia and Argentina fell from over 50 million hectares to under 33 mil-lion. Wheat production fell from over 80 million tons to under 60 million tons.

The Economic Research Service of the U.S. Department of Agri-culture estimates that "If these four countries had maintained the wheat area they had in 1967 and 1968, yields obtained from 1969 through 1972 would have produced over 90 million tons more wheat." The extent to which governent actions in rich countries affect poor countries is only now being analyzed. The impact of the U.S. and international food-assistance programs of the 1960s is also being ssed. Some economists feel that these programs enabled governments to postpone tough decisions, such as choosing between industrial or agricultural investments and introducing population-control measures.

Despite the huge shipments of U.S. aid in the 1980s, the average per-person intake of calories in India is about what it was in

The suggestion that policy makers helped create the present situation and still have the power to rectify it is not popular with those who believe that the world is moving relentlessly toward a doomsdaylike reckoning.

William Paddock, one provocative thinker on such subjects, has suggested that the era of major famines has arrived and that it is time for countries like the United States to start drawing up lists of which count-les to save and which to write off as lost,

According to the Economic Research Service, the most difficult problem facing delegates to the conference in Rome is not how to increase the output of food, but rather how to distribute

Their analysis shows that food production grew faster than the population between 1954 and 1972. so that, on the avarage, the 3.8 billion people in the world in 1973 have 10 per cent more to eat than did the 2.5 billion people in the world in 1954.

In spite of their difficulties, the developing countries actually expanded their farm output faster than developed ones during those years. But in the developing nations, the gains were used up feeding populations that grew much faster than in rich

In short, the gains of the 1960s were not distributed equally. More than half the increase in food cutput went to affluent countries with 30 per cent of world population, while the rest was spread among the poorer 70 per cent of the world.

Moreover, the scientific revolution in agriculture has yet to be fully applied in the less develop-ed world. The new fertilizers and seeds of high-yield strains of wheat, com and rice have been concentrated in only a few countries so far, starting with Mexico in the 1940s and focusing lately on India and Pakistan. And in India and Pakistan, only a few provinces are using the methods. But even with the application of new technology, political willpower and imagination of leaders in rich and poor countries alike may still be the decisive factor in finding solutions. The agenda for the World Food Conference gives a hint of the political difficulties that lie anead. The main "national and international programs of action?

• Policies for improving diets and nutrition in all countries. Better exchanges of information between countries about demand and supply, and the establishment of an international grain stockpile.
• Expanded trade.

Representatives of developing countries plainly feel that rich nations have a heavy responsibility to provide them with the technical aid, fertilizer and credit needed to expand their own pro-

The United States supports the strategy of gradually replacing the food aid of the past with technical assistance. The Ford administration is seeking $200 million in new funds for this purpose in its fiscal 1975 budget.

But U.S. economists in and out of the government also feel that other political leaders have got to supplement this help by reordering some of their priorities. In some cases this means spending more money on farming and less on industrial development,

Hungary Said To Urge Writer To Go Into Exile

VIENNA, Nov. 4 (AP).— Hungarian writer Gyorgy Konrad, released by Budspest authorities last Monday after a five-day detention, has been asked by Hungarian authorities to emigrate to the West, the Austrian news-paper Die Presse reported today. The newspaper quoted Mr. Konrad's wife in Budapest as saying that during questioning by secret police, officials "suggested" to her husband that he apply for visas for himself and his family and that applications would be "favorably dealt with."

Earlier reports, from Paris, said that Mr. Komad, who is known in the West for his novel "The Visitor" and other books, was urged to emigrate or face trial The writer was released along with Mikios Szentjoby, a young poet, and sociologist Ivan Sze lenyi. They, too, are to leave Hungary, Die Presse reported:

Giscard Aide Cites Communist-Led Union

By James Goldsborough PARIS, Nov. 4 (IHT) .- Presiient Valéry Giscard d'Estaing today charged that the General Labor Confederation (CGT) France's Communist-led labor union, was turning the current wave of strikes into a "political action," with the aim of weakening the government.

With the crippling postal strike wildcat strikes breaking out seroes the country, Mr. Giscard d'Es-taing and members of his government have begun an attempt to turn public opinion against the strikers.

"There is an extraordinary attempt being made by the COT and the Communist party to politicize this conflict." Xavier Beauchamps, Mr. Giscard d'Es-taing's press spokesman, said to-

Postal officials and union representatives met twice today to try to end the conflict that has stopped mail deliveries and re-duced telegraph and telephone service since mid-October. There is still no agreement on the workers' basic demand for a 200-franc-a-month raise.

Last night, Gabriel Peromet, a junior minister in charge of the civil service, made the first charge of politicization of the strike. "If it is a political movement, let it be called that," he "If it is an honest union movement, things can be worked out."

Charges Denied

The government's charges today -quickly denied by the unionsshowed an increasing official sensitivity that this is the left's first concerted attempt to embarrase Mr. Giscard d'Estaing and show that centrist governments cannot solve labor problems Jean-Pierre Chevenement, one of the more left-leaning Socialist leaders, wrote today that Mr. Giscard d'Estaing was "leading France to catastrophe."

Mr. Beauchamps denied that catastrophe was near. "The President does not have a point of view fundamentally pessimistic on these labor conflicts," he said. "He considers that they are bound to occur during a difficult economic period."

A few new strikes will be added the postal strike, particularly the public services sector Electricity workers plan to wall off the job tomorrow, with some cuts in power expected. Coal miners in the Lorraine stayed off the job to protest mine shutdowns, and printing unions scheduled strike for Nov. 13, calling for nthat date. Tonight it was no clear if this would be carried out. Recent additions to our Distillery enable us to ship more Jack Daniel's overseas. Sadly, the quantity is still limited. But the quality is worth a visit to any of the restaurants, bars and hotels listed below.

There, you'll discover that Jack Daniel's is neither bourbon nor scotch. It's in a special category which the U.S. government calls by a special name: Tennessee Whiskey. Each drop is seeped through twelve feet of hard maple charcoal to smooth its taste before aging. And because other whiskeys aren't made this way, other whiskeys aren't as smooth.

(WP).—Former President Richard Nixon improved enough today for his doctors to allow him to get out of bed for the first time since postoperative shock took him to the brink of death last Tuesday night.
They told his nurses at Long Beach Memorial Medical Center to help him take a few steps around his hospital room, but to watch very carefully that this exercise did not cause any unusual changes in his heart rhythm or blood pressure.

His doctors said that Mr. Nixon, 61, "still continues to show gradual improvement" after having been taken off the critical list yesterday. They reported that his vital signs—pulse, blood pressure, respiration and temperature-re-

But the doctors revealed today the appearance of what could be a serious complication in Mr. Nixon's recovery—the presence of small amount of fluid in his left lung. Dr. John Lungren, the former president's principal physician, said that he is "concerned" over the fact that fluid has remained in the lung.

The doctors are hoping that this fluid, which could cause a collapse of Mr. Nixon's lung and Clotted Blood Dr. Lungren blamed the existence of fluid in Mr. Nixon's lung on an "hritation of the diaphragm" that arose from a large mass of clotted blood that had collected in his left flank. This blood, which came from the massive internal bleeding that threw Mr. Nixon into shock last Tuesday, six hours after surgery, is pressing upward on his left Doctors operated on Mr. Nixon early last Tuesday morning to stop the potentially fatal flow to his lungs of clots formed as 2 result of phlebitis in his left leg.

"We both voted. I hope they're counted. It might be important." The President was referring to the absentee ballots cast by Mrs. Ford and himself.

Mr. Ford departed slightly from his prepared text, using the words "minority decision" rather than "minority rule" in urging voters to vote.

"Every eligible voter will send a message to Washington and to the world tomorrow," he said.

Those who cast their ballots whether they vote for Republican or Democratic candidates or for others, will be voting 'yes' for our American tradition of government by the people and for the people," the President

"Everyone who can get to the polls and fails to go, who refuses to exercise the precious right of a free citizen to vote his or her honest conviction, is actually voting 'no' on our system of self-government," Mr. Ford said.

As the President spoke, Democratic landslide appeared imminent in the first national election to reflect the effects of the Watergate scandal and staggering economy.

The final pre-election survey the Associated Press shows that Democrats have a chance t win two-thirds control of both houses of Congress and a record number of governorships. Democratic leaders predicted yesterday that the party would tions, while Republicans talked about holding down their losses. First Since Resignation

The balloting for 35 governorships, 34 Senate seats and all 435 House seats will be the first since Richard Nixon resigned as President in August and was pardoned by President Ford.

The election also comes amid mounting inflation and unemployment and national debate over what to do about both. Mr. Ford has campaigned for GOP cancidates, saying that he needs a Congress he can work with to cure the economy, while Democrats have called for congressional strength to put through their own solution anticipated Democratic landslide comes just two years after Mr. Nixon won for the Republicans one of history's two biggest presidential victories.

Although Republicans contended that their candidates were gaining strength across the country, the latest available information showed Democrats still ahead in most of the key races. The AP survey, based on reports from bureaus in all 50 states, late polls and interviews with political strategists for the major parties

In Speech Commemorating Churchill

Fulbright Takes Gloomy View of Dangers Facing the World

By Roy Reed PULTON, Mo., Nov. 4 (NYT). -Sen. William Fulbright stepped into one of the best-known forums of the English-speaking world here and delivered the last major statement on the world's condition that he is expected to make before leaving office next

It was the kind of exploring for "new realities" that the Arkansas Democrat has become known for. The speech Sauurday was also gloomy, even by Fulbright standards, as an ob-server in Washington said when Speaking where Winston Churchill made his "Iron Curtain" speech in 1946 after his rejection by British voters, Sen. Fulbright, who was defeated earlier this year in the Democratic primary, warned that the world's economic turmoil could lead to war, famine and depression.

"Democracy itself is threaten-

Unless the Middle East "time bomb" is defused, he said, the world will see "a new war a new oil boycott, and possibly consequences therefrom ranging from another great depression to Armageddon itself.'

Westminster College decided that this year's John Findley Green Lecture should commemorate the 100th anniversary, on Nov. 30, of Churchill's birth. Sen. Fulbright, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee since 1959, was chosen to give the lecture.

His speech easily matched Churchill's 1946 Green Lecture in pessimism. The British leader, speaking here on March 5, 1946, told an audience that included President Harry S Truman, that from Stettin in the Baltic to world." hope, saying that if Britain and the United States joined hands, "the high roads of the future will be clear, not only for us, but for all: not only for our time. but for the century to come."

Sen. Fulbright seemed more resigned. He said:

"History casts no doubt at all on the ability of human beings to deal rationally with their problems, but the greatest doubt on their will to do so. The signals of the past are thus clouded and ambiguous, suggesting hope but not confidence in the triumph of reason. With nothing to lose in any event, it seems well worth a try.

Sen. Fuibright admitted that his powers of persuasion had been less than he would have liked over the years.

"It is one of the perversities of human nature that people have a far greater capacity for enduring disasters than for preventing them, even when the danger is plain and imminent,"

Warns of Dangers

Today's plainest and most imminent danger is economic collapse and political upheaval, he said. He traced the danger to inflation caused by an imbalance of international payments "caused by the quadrupling of the price of oil since the October war." He said if the trend continued, the credit of consuming countries, rich and poor, would soon be exhausted. "giving rise to economic collapse and political upheaval."

Sen. Fulbright said that that could be avoided only by a new austerity for Americans and a settlement of the Middle East

He blamed American "high living" for much of the problem. "We cannot blame the oil producers for the irresponsible and rapacious extravagance of our vaunted way of life," he said.

Besides returning to a simple way of living. Americans must accept mandatory government measures including a tax increase greater than that recommended by President Ford, he

Whose Crisis in Vietnam?

That a political crisis is in the making in South Vietnam seems obvious enough, and that President Thieu is the principal target of increasing protest is also patent. What is not clear is whether the crisis stems primarily from the way the Thien government is managing the continuing war with the North, or from the war itself.

Quite probably both elements are present. Corruption, and the arbitrary silencing of complaints against it, are aspects of the Thien regime that have long stimulated opposition; the rising tide of such opposition, especially among South Vietnamese Roman Catholics, who have a strong leaven of anti-Communism and include many refugees from the North, shows that it is possible to differentiate between resistance to Thieu and submission to the Viet Cong.

But the long war brings its own weariness and tends to blend together those who oppose Thieu, the authoritative head of a corrupt administration, and Thieu, the symbol and chief exponent of war to the bitter end. And there are various gradations within both groups. Can Thien, for example, satisfactorily cleanse his own government and restore civil liberties to a point that would satisfy enough of his opponents to permit his rule to function?

The withdrawal of American troops from Vietnam was based on two assumptions: the first, that North and South Vietnam would honor their agreement to, in effect, conduct their contest along purely political lines; the second, that if the fighting continued, South Vietnam could sustain itself without assistance other than money and material. The first assumption soon vanished; the second is now in doubt.

The fault in those two official American assumptions is not that either of them are immoral in terms of any international ethic. Only those who viewed Hanoi through rosecolored glasses (or those of revolutionary red) took the standpoint that North Vietnam's effort to control the whole region was either necessarily good, or necessarily what the people wanted. Any error lay in misreading facts, and in drawing conclusions with respect to American obligations and interests that also aren't necessarily so, and this has been chronic in American policy with regard to Vietnam since before Dien Bien Phu. The present critical state of affairs in Saigon may require a final determination on the matter in Washington - but real decisions about Vietnam's future, however, will not be made there, but in Vietnam.

Recession-cum-Inflation

With each succeeding week, it has become increasingly clear that the American economy is in a recession, as chairman Arthur Burns of the Federal Reserve and President Ford's top economic advisers now concede. The real output of the economy has fallen for three quarters in a row, and is 3 per cent below its rate in the final quarter of 1973; the number of jobless workers has risen from 4.1 million a year ago to over 5.5 million now. Many private economists fear that this recession could become the longest and most severe of the post-World War II period.

The problem of how to deal with the recession is greatly complicated by the persistence of the worst inflation this nation has experienced since the Civil War-and the worst ever in its peacetime history. For the administration drastically to swing fiscal and monetary policy from restraint to stimulus would be to accept the present cruel rate of inflation and even exacerbate it. But for the administration to rely almost entirely on the recession to end the inflation would be to subject millions of Americans to needlessly prolonged joblessness and hardship.

If a rerun of the Nixon administration's erratic and inflationary stop-go course is to be avoided, President Ford will have to recognize that the current inflation, though kicked off by a burst of resulting from huge budget deficits and too rapid an increase in the money supply, has become a cost-push inflation, resulting from the frantic effort of labor and other groups to catch up with skyrocketing prices that have undermined their real income-and the scramble of businesses, farmers and others to pass on (or even anticipate) those cost increases, lest their own profits be undermined. This cost-push inflation is intensified by international factors, especially by the exorbitant price for oil imposed by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and by the worldwide shortage of food and other commodities.

On the wage front in the United States the administration should be moving to head off what is becoming a level of wage settlements that could build high inflation into the price structure for years to come, imposing serious strains on the American polity as well as the economy. In the past three months, unit labor costs have risen at an annual rate of nearly 14 per cent, giving a mean twist to the price-wage-price spiral.

If the sharp uptrend in labor costs is to be brought under control, in both the nonunion and union sectors of the economy, the government should seek to increase the takehome pay of workers by easing their tax burdens. One way to avoid building pay increases far in excess of productivity into the price structure would be to grant lower-income employees a tax credit. The administration should link such a "social compact" tax reduction to a wage guideline that would permit an early return to noninflationary wage settlements. The resulting revenue loss should be offset by a moderate tax increase on upper-income taxpayers (above at least $20,000) and corporations, and by ending oil and gas depletion allowances, eliminating undue tax breaks on foreign oil earnings and other tax reforms.

At the same time, the administration needs to demonstrate that it means business on the price front. focusing its efforts on such inflation-prone areas as oil, construction, medical care, and food. While paying lip service to the need for such "structural" efforts to curb inflation in key sectors, President Ford has actually thrown his weight on the side of inflation by laxity of his approach to energy conservation and by hitting the campaign trail to tell American farmers that he is prepared to limit beef imports that threaten to keep down American livestock

Mr. Ford's politicized economics—his own brand of the old-time religion that may become known as "Jerryatrics"-will condemn the nation to needlessly protracted inflation and recession, and will deepen the public's lack of confidence in the economic capability and integrity of this administration.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Oil Consumer Unity

suming countries, to assure "secure oil supplies on reasonable and equitable terms," is now a virtual certainty. With formal U.S. notification of acceptance deposited in Brussels, the extraordinary oil-sharing pact negotiated in the seven months following the Washington Energy Conference of last February will come into effect.

Of the 12 nations participating in the negotiations, only Norway has withdrawn, and France, which stayed out from the start, has elected to remain outside. A new international energy agency, under the aegis of the 24-nation OECD, is to begin to function this month on a provisional basis, pending formal parliamentary ratification in the countries where this is needed. Up to six other OECD countries have shown interest in joining the 11 original participants.

What this means is that countries that import 80 per cent of the world's oil are uniting behind a program that could somewhat redress the balance between consuming and producing countries. The agreement to build huge oil stockpiles and share total production and imports in the event of another oil embargo is the key element that

A "counter cartel" of the major oil-con- makes possible a community of interest between the United States, which obtains only 15 per cent of its oil in the Middle East, and its allies in Europe and Japan, which depend on the Arabs for 80 per cent or more of their

> Through the new energy agency, the oilconsuming nations now intend to undertake a long-term program of energy conservation and accelerated development of alternative energy supplies. The more rapidly they can reduce dependence on the oil-exporting nations, the sooner they will have a chance to break the extortionate price level, quadrupled in a year, that the oil-producers' cartel has imposed on the world economy.

But alternative energy supplies will take years to develop. The immediate challenge is to limit consumption. Parallel action by all the oil-consuming nations could make stringent conservation politically easier for each of them. American leadership is the key. Moves to limit American oil imports, to ration gasoline if necessary, to raise taxes with the aim of lowering gasoline consumption, would show that the United States means business.

WASHINGTON—Repeated rumors of CIA plots to "destabilize" the Portuguese regime prompt the question: What did Mr. Kissinger mean when he said that "I don't see why we need to stand by and watch a country go Communist due to the irresponsibility of its own people"?

Mr. Rissinger made the remark, according to documents which became available recently, during the "40 Committee" discussions in 1970 on secret operations in Chile.

It is difficult to credit the rumors from Lisbon, if only because informed opinion in Washington agrees that it would be the height of folly to prompt a coup in Portugal. But Kissinger has other ways of pursuing his objective, and some politicians in the NATO countries are wor-ried that he may go too far. They believe that he is trying to use NATO to manipulate the internal politics of the member

View of NATO

The Communists now in the Portuguese government, and Com-munist leaders in Italy, say that they don't want to take their countries out of NATO. To advocate departure from NATO would be to give the impression of moving toward the Soviet camp, and to lose public support. NATO membership is seen by some people as a guarantee of democracy and thus, perversely, as the condition under which their country could afford to have Communists in the government,

Therefore Washington, by countenancing Portugal's membership of NATO, may appear to be signaling Rome that Italy too could stay in NATO as well as have Communists in the coali-tion. This is certainly not the ege Washington wants convey, and it has engaged in some elaborate behind-the-scenes maneuvering to get its point

Now the meeting of the NATO defense ministers comprising the miclear planning group, which was due to be held in Rome this week, has been postponed. One reason Washington gave was that it could not disclose highly secret information to a government whose Communist members or officials might pass it back to

It was serving notice also on Italian politicians who favor a coalition with Communists that, ultimately, they might have to choose be ween such a coalition and NATO membership.

Portugal's request for economic aid during President Gomes's re-cent visit to Washington also elicited a polite lecture from Kissinger about the difficulty of getting congressional aid appropriations these days, especially for countries with Communist connections. Portuguese officials argue, as politely, that economic aid would avert the impending massive unemployment, and the concomitant political unrest which could push the country further to the left. By delaying the aid, and by using it as a political lever, Washington may be hastening the very result it wants to prevent.

Any basis for predicting the likely course of events has now been swept away by the new electoral law which increased the electorate from two millon to five. Some public opinion polls taken privately in Portugal indicated a Communist vote of between 15 and 20 per cent, but that was before the new law. The March election will produce only a constituent assembly, not a new government, and therefore the chances are that the Communists will stay on in the coalition. In a country where the Roman will still be severe but can be engage, from the inside, in all the power games and intrigues which the established political parties have practiced in seeking to dominate the political life of their countries.

Non-Communists and anti-Communists in the West obviously have a political as well as an ideological stake in preventing such Communist domination. But unless they recognize the change which has come over Western Communist parties, and adjust their own tactics accordingly, they are more likely to advance the Communists' objectives than to thwart them. For the United States, and for NATO, this means evolving a new for-mula which would allow NATO membership of countries with Communists in their governments, rather than threatening to isolate or to cast out such been writing a humorous column in the Daily Express five fimes a week for the past 50 years. This is enough to bring the hot spot of a sense of betrayal to the cheeks of columnists who secret-ly hope for a career graduating in old age toward the Encyclopaedia Britannica and a deadline every seven vears.

"Beachcomber" is 81 and still writes (but recently only once a week) a column he began in 1924. Last Saturday he was still at it, advising the country to have elections every month on the grounds that it would keep the politicians so busy they would not have time to get into mischief; reporting on an incident between a couple of crazy "Zombririan" ballet dancers and, using his brand of what he calls "horse non-sense," he advised a distracted mother whose son insisted on wearing his socks over his shoes. "Beachcomber" told her to make her son wear shoes over the socks over his shoes, and if necessary shoes and socks over the shoes over his socks and continue the treatment until the lad was brought to his senses or rendered immobile.

As you see he is an exponent of the kind of English sany humor which some take to greedily and others prefer frigidly leave alone.

Study Asks Revenue Sharing's Continuation

By Ernest Holsendolph

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4 (NYT). —A two-year study of federal revenue sharing has concluded that despite some shortcomings. the $30.2-billion program should be renewed as soon as possible, and on a long-term basis.

Passed in 1972 as the cornerstone of President Richard Nixon's new federalism, the program has been returning money to 39,000 state and local governments. The five-year plan is just past the halfway point and has resulted in the disbursement of more than $15 billion, officials said here.

The Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations, composed of private citizens, members of Congress and representatives of local and state governments, has concluded that Congress should renew the plan, due to expire Dec. 31, 1976.

The commission, established in 1959 by Congress to monitor national governmental operations, was an early supporter of revenue sharing.

Its chairman is Robert Merriam, a Chicago business execu-tive. Among its 23 members are Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., and Caspar Weinberger, the Secretary of Health, Education and Wel-

The commission supported renewal of the program despite contentions that it has failed to attract a significant amount of citizen participation in the design of new local programs and that there are insufficient safeguards against racial and sexual discrimination in the use of the funds.

On the positive side, the commission said, revenue sharing has served to help equalize rich and poor states, has given more to needy central cities than to wellto-do suburbs and has allowed states and local communities to enjoy a healthy and wide discretion in use of the money. There was some division of oninion as to what form revenue sharing should take in the future. Local officials, who are recipients of revenue sharing, supported the majority opinion that funds should come from a permanent trust rather than in five-year appropriations.

Furthermore, they believed that the funds should be tied to a constant percentage of the federal personal income tax base. This approach, they asserted, would allow local governments and spending agencies to plan on the basis of known income sources.

Sen. Muskie said he preferred the flexibility of periodic appropriations.

Representatives of civil rights organizations, minority groups and Sen. Muskie have criticized the Office of Revenue Sharing for not being more active in enforcement of the anti-discrimination provisions of the program.

The commission found that out of 41 civil rights complaints handled by the office between October, 1972, and June, 1974, 18 had been resolved, 22 were in the process of negotiation and one was in court.

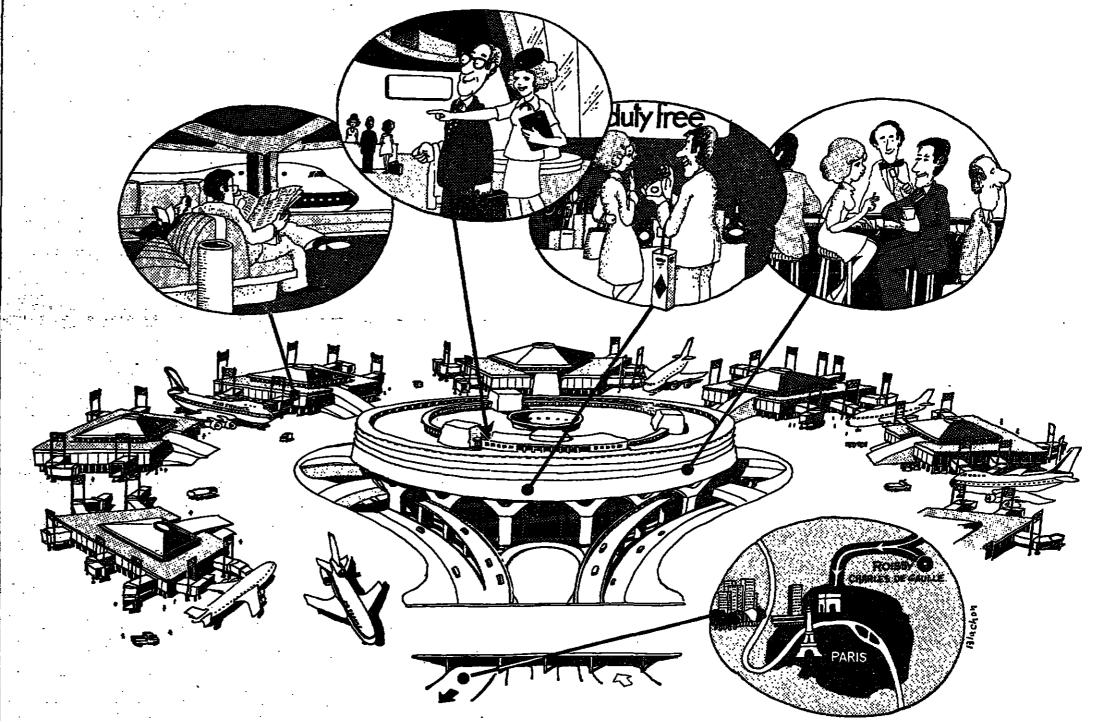

"The Office of Revenue Sharing has tended to emphasize mediation and conciliation in the resolution of allegations of dis-crimination." the commission

Director's View

Graham Watt, director of the office, said that he did not favor a much larger compliance program in connection with revenue sharing preferring instead to work through local and state agencies that deal with minority and sexual discrimination. The commission's call for early extension of revenue sharing meant that the program's supporters anticipated a tough political battle, according to Richard Nathan, a senior fellow of the Brookings Institution, who is directing a study of revenue

The dissent of Sen. Muskie was an early warning to revenuesharing supporters, he said, as well as a shift of revenue-sharing monitoring from the House Finance and Ways and Means Committees to the Government Opera.

Charles de Gaulle airport. Paris'newest attraction. Enjoy it.

As of November 1st most Air France Paris flights land at Charles de Gaulle. So much the better for you. Because it'd be worth visiting even if it weren't an airport.

But its striking architecture wasn't designed for looks alone. It encompasses a great many innovations for your comfort and convenience.

Spacious boarding and arrival areas arranged like satellites around the main terminal; moving carpets to whisk you effortlessly from place to place; shorter waiting time between check-in and boarding.

Charles de Gaulle is not only close to Paris, but you arrive at the Terminal Porte Maillot near the major business and tourist areas of the right bank. And right across the street from the new Méridien, our four-star hotel with 1023 de luxe rooms.

And since it's Air France's new home base, we didn't spare any effort on our installation. Three of the seven satellites are exclusively for Air France passengers. Thus you avoid crowds and confusion. You have the most direct access through customs to taxis and buses.

Plus the fastest most convenient transit facilities. With all our personnel trained to handle any kind of travel problem, from writing a ticket to reserving a hotel room.

Soviet Satirical Magazine Attacks Increase in Smoking

By Hedrick Smith

MOSCOW (NYT), - Krokodii. the Soviet satirical weekly magazine, appeared recently with a cover cartoon showing a yellowfaced, green-eyed smoker, head on the table like a suicide victim, hand clutching a pack of cigarettes with one protruding from the pack like the barrel of a pistol.

In a striking attack on smoking in this country, where antismoking advertisements are in-frequent, Krokodil devoted an entire 16-page issue to the question, It disclosed that smoking had grown four times as rapidly as the population since 1970.

Domestic cigarette production this year, according to Vladimir Kholostiv, chief of the tobacco administration, will hit 373 billion-enough for everyone over 14 to smoke 100 packs a year even without sizable imports from Bulgaria, Cuba, Yugoslavia and the United States, By comparison, the average American aged 18 or over smokes over 200 packs a year.

The rise in Soviet cigarette production since 1970 has been 15.5 per cent, while the rise in population has been just under 4 per cent,

The Thing to Do

The Krokodil article confirmed what almost any Soviet citizen will tell a visitor—that smoking is increasingly fashionable and popular especially among women and young peo-ple, despite the introduction of more expensive brands.

The rough-cut Primas, cheapest of all, still sell for 14 kopecks (18 cents) a pack. The more popular Stolichnye or Rossiskiye cost 40 kopecks (52 cents) and some people will pay 80 kopecks (78 cents) for Yava longs, cal Soviet practice of citing bad examples in the West whenever trying to combat harmful practices at home, noted the timidity of articles by doctors quoting findings abroad on the harmful effects of smoking, "In a word, all these terrors take place somewhere in far-off lands or in the countries of capitalism," Krokodil said "And our smoker is left with the brave hope that Colombia, Costa Rica and Venezuela, the firmest U.S. allies when the embargo was set up by the Organization of American States, have requested that the original decision be reconsidered.

Next weekend, a conference of OAS delegates from 23 countries will meet in Quito, Ecuador, and the required two-thirds majority is expected to vote to leave each member country free to choose its own kind of relations with Cuba. For the first time in the history of the Cuban controversy, the United States, so far as Latin diplomats in three countries have been able to determine, has no clear position.

"The problem is over now," said Arturo Frondizi, president of Argenting when the United States, under President John Kennedy, began pushing for the isolation

Full Reincorporation

"Now we're heading toward the full reincorporation of Cuba in the Latin American community, Mr. Frondizi said. "But what has changed is the relationship between the United States and Russia, not relations with Latin Isolating Cuba from Latin America failed to bring down Premier Castro's government or force it to change course, as three U.S. presidents apparently hoped it would. In the view of Latin American leaders, it halted the spread of Cuban-style revolution only when the United States was willing to intervene in Latin American internal affairs, For these leaders the policy had three other effects that were predicted by public figures as it was taking shape in 1961 and 1962.

Mr. Frondizi made his predictions in letters to and conversations with Mr. Kennedy. The late Francisco Santiago Dantes of Brazil, then foreign minister, made his publicly in speeches. First, Cuba, despite Mr. Castro's vaunted nationalism, became a Soviet satellite.

Then, the inter-American sys-tem of defense alliances and the OAS, which had been built on the principle of self-determination for all member states, was strained to the breaking point.

Latin American leaders asserted that the precedent for inter-vention set by the decision in 1962 to expel Cubs from the in-ter-American system opened the way for the U.S. invasion of the Dominican Republic in 1965 and for CIA support for the opposi-tion to the late president Salvador Allende of Chile.

"The U.S. became the great judge of the fitness of governments in the hemisphere," said Sen Julio Turbay, who argued with the United States in favor of diplomatic action against Cuba when he was Colombian foreign minister in 1961. "That was not what we had intended." Increasingly Radicalized

Finally, Latin domestic politics became increasingly radicalized under the pressure to line up on the U.S. side in the cold war. Stumbling democratic governments that had favored Cuba's right to go its own way were ousted by military coups in Argentina in 1962, in Brazil in 1964 and in Chile last year.

But now even Mr. Castro has been showing signs that he wants an end not only to Cuba's isolation from Latin America but from the United States as well. The top of the wall around Cuba was completed in 1964, after the coup in Brazil, when Venezuela presented evidence to the OAS of Cuba's clandestine landing of arms in Venezuela.

As a result, the Russians said that only about 60 non-Soviet journalists, including technicians and supervisory personnel, will be accredited for the visit. Apparently, a similar number of Soviet journalists will be on hand. Ender Negotiations

What is not clear yet is whether the proposed 60 figure includes all foreign reporters, Eastern Europeans, Western Europeans and others, or just Americans, That point, an American source said today, is under negotiation

In any event, the Soviet decision to restrict coverage means that the majority of reporters traveling with Mr. Ford to Japan and South Korea before he meets with Mr. Brezhnev will be unable to cover the Vladivostok talks. The two previous summit conferences in the Soviet, Union were accessible to all journalists and the events attracted hundreds from the United States and Vladivostok for years has been closed to foreigners and the initial amouncement of the summit there raised the possibility that those restrictions had been lifted. They were not.

Mr. Ford, whose tentative schedule calls for him to arrive before lunch on Nov. 23 and leave before lunch on Nov. 24, will be taken directly to the site of the sessions, apparently a col-lection of guest houses and sana-torium set in a wood far from any population center.

The press will be kept in an equally remote place, 15 minutes' distance away.

Before the summit talks could be announced during Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's recent visit here, one of the stumbling blocks reportedly was the diffi-culty in chocing an appropriate place for the meeting.

Unknows to Americans Vladivostok was chosen because no other location in the Far East was suitable. But since the area has been closed for so long, Americans here have no idea at expect in the way of communications and accommodations for the elaborate entourage that travels with the President.

AEC Official Suggests Idea for Military Bases By John W. Finney WASHINGTON, Nov. 4 (NYT) -The director of the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory has proposed that the Defense Department as a move toward easing the energy crisis, saild nuclear power plants, fueled by fissionable material from obsolete atomic weapons, for military bases. As envisioned by Dr. Harold Agnew, the director of the Atomic Energy Commission's laboratory in Los Alamos, N.M., some of the nuclear power plants for overseas bases could be mounted on barges or in sunken submarine hulls

States, he suggested that the Defense Department cooperate with private industry in building standardized atomic nover plant that could meet a range of power requirements. The proposal was presented by Dr. Agriew in a private lecture in September before the Council on Foreign Relations in New York City. With Dr. Agnew's permission, a copy of his lecture is being circulated by some of his scientific colleagues, who view the proposal as a novel approach toward using the atomic weapons

'Soon as Possible'

In urging that the Defense Department "initiate an accelerated program to provide nuclear power plants for its bases worldwide," Dr. Agnew said the Pentagon "should pursue a policy of giving up its dependence on petroleum products whenever possible, as soon as possible." His proposal as he noted in his lecture, has drawn an initial negative reaction from Defense Department officials, who have raised the objection of the high cost of constructing nuclear power plants. As a solution to the cost problem Dr. Agnew suggested that the Defense Department could "buy in" by providing private firms building the plants with nuclear fuel obtained from a stockpile of obsolete atomic weapons. This proposal for "mining the stockpile," in turn, is re-lated to a program long pushed by the Atomic Energy Commission's weapons laboratories to "modernize the stockoile" by production of a new generation of more accurate, less powerful atomic weapons for battlefield

Selective modernization of the stockpile, he estimated, would recover thousands of kilograms of enriched uranium and plutonium that could be used in reactors to produce electrical energy. As an example, he said there was one type of atomic weapon in the stockpile which, if reduced in number by 50 per cent, could provide enough enriched uranium to fuel 25 1,000-megawatt nuclear power plants. For remote bases, he said tech-nology was available to build mobile atomic power plants producing up to 100 megawatts of electricity. The plants, he suggested, could be mounted on barges or preferably in modified submarine hulls which could be sunk in about 100 feet of water, making the plants "essentially immune" to non-nuclear attack.

"Look," said Nicole Cooremans, one of Mr. Hicks's three Belgian associates (the others are Claude Nivelles and Willy De Smeth we'll provide interior design for your Renaissance castle-if you have one-or we'll sell you a Christmas present for 300 Belgian francs and upwards. Mr. Hicks, a former student at the London Council School of Arts and Crafts, graduated in stage design. He didn't quote a fellow countryman of his that "all the world is a stage" but the answer 'Good Table'

"Interior design is the art of accomplishing a maximum with a minimum." he said. The important thing, as I see it," Mr. Hicks continued, "Is to try to bring good taste to everyone, regardless of race, creed and income bracket." Mr. Hicks, at times, sounds like a sophisticated revival preacher.

"In addition," said Mr. Hicks, "w, try to mix psychology with interior design. We want to keep the setting in tune with the personality of the customer."

Con' .....tion again: Mr. Hicks appears to have a hang-up on ultra-modern geometric forms and souare plastic tables. He taiks about a "geometric revolution." But it seems that he almost always manages to include a piece or two fror times past, European or otherwise. An authentic Buddha may be next to a bunch of flowers, living or dried and some geometric wooden sculptures in one of his "tablescapes."

"It used to be, remember, that you could wake up in a hotel room, look at the walls, the ceiling and the floor and know instantly that this is France, Germany, England... I and my associates would like to return progressively to that

"How can ordinary wage earners afford your services?" Mr. Hicks was asked "We try to make sure they can," said Mr. Hicks, "It is aren't exclusively in the carriage trade."

Mr. Hicks pointed at his whiteon-blue tie. "Look," he said, "at the geometric design. You can make out an H for H in Hicks and an 'x' for 'icks'. We design ties for people with names ranging from A to Z."

Do you plan to get into fashion design?" he was asked. "Eventually," said Mr. Hicks. "The Japanese want to dress like Europeans, but their legs are too short. The Enropeans want kimonos but their backs are too broad. I'd like to work that equation out."

Mr. Hicks is the author of five books on easy living and interior design. One of the books is on bathrooms, a badly neglected issue in his opinion.

Hicks Bathroom

A Ricks-designed bathroom is likely to have wall-to-wall carpeting, pictures on the walls, a TV set and telephone. The tub, very likely, will be placed in the middie of the room, for easy access. "You started out as a stage designer. Have you done any scenography?"
"""c," Mr. Hicks said, "but I'd love to set the stage for a Wagner opera at the Metropolitan, I'm a Wagner fan (married to a half-German) and I'd do it more or less for Ecks if they asked me." "You spend a lot of time in the air," a journalist said. "How do you find time to work between London, New York, Tokyo and Brussels?"

"I spend two or three months each year, relaxing in the South of France." Mr. Hicks said. "Then I have my farm (1,600 acres) near Oxford. There I manage to find time for thinking and doodling. I am basically a farmer at heart."

we end up with endivia versus endinus, shamelessly abandoned by scientific terminology. Popular usage is even worse. The Belgians, the world's lead-ing producers of both, should be able to tell one from another, but when we lurn in that direction for enlightenment, we run into still another term. chicon. a word which intrigues etymologists. They shun the simple explanation that this is simply a shortened form of the word chicory, and derive it from chicot, stump, because it usually appears on the market with a piece of its stump on the bottom. So does cabbage, but it is not included under the name chicon-because, the etymologists continue, chicorée (chicory) attracted chicot to itself, but chou (cabbage) did not. So is chicon chicory? Perhaps—which still doesn't tell us what chicory is.

This meaning seems to have spilled over into Italy, for I have heard word used with the same meaning in Rome, where I suppose it ought to be spelled cicon; but I do not find it in any Italian dictionary, so the Roman word must be local or slang. Official Italian avoids the issue by referring to insalata belga, Belgian salad. This, however, is accepted generally as a synonym for endivia, which, as in France,

C. endivia is cicoria. What we need is a sort of World Court to determine which country has a right to impose its own definition on the others, but in its absence I propose to follow the example of Belgium, which has a maternal interest in both plants. Getting rid of chicon, which seems to change meaning every few miles, we will discover that in Belgium-well in most parts of Belgium-endine is C. endivia and chicorée is C. intybus—as in England and Ger-many. Getting out of the dictionary and onto the table, this means that chicory is the tightly wrapped spindle-shaped bundle of salad greens that looks something like a small, shiny ear of sweet corn with its husk on, but chicory is all husks and no coh, and the "husks"-the leaves-are tender and tasty.

From the Greek

The word chicory is less of a wilderness. It comes from the Greek kichoreia or kicheiron, influenced on its way into English by the French chicorée, which itself was so directly modeled upon the Italian cicoria that when it first entered French in the 13th century it was pro nounced, in imitation of Italian, as if it were spelled tchicoria. and even today recalls its ancestry by sounding as if it were spelled tchicorée. In English, chicory has given rise to succory, which Webster thinks was influenced by the Dutch suker, sugar; this seems unreasonable since one of the most striking characteristics of chloory is bitterness. The Random House dictionary offers a more plausible explanation: succory harks back to the Latin succus, juice; chicory root. is rich in sap.

Whatever its origin, succory is a folksy word and it is used with folksy imprecision. It can stand indiscriminately for any plant of the genus Cichorium (and thus for both chicory and endive), and even for some for-eign to it. Blue succory is the southern European Catananche coerula; gum succory is a Euro-pean weed, Chondilla juncea, or, indeed, any other plant of that genus; and lamb succory is Arno-seris minima, a small European herb also called dwarf nipple-delion (chicory foliage does resemble that of the dandelion, but its flowers are blue); coffeeweed (chicary is probably the most common coffee substitute or adulterant); blueweed; blue sailors; and ragged sailors because its petals are of ineven length. giving it a tattered look. The last seems to be unknown to the dictionaries. Webster lists ragged sailor, but defines it as meaning Webster lists ragged the cornflower or the prince's feather.

In French, Alexandre Dumas calls chicorée the pissentit (pissabed), but he is alone in this definition. Pissenlit is ordinarily understood to mean the dandelion, with which chicory does indeed share the diuretic effect promised by the name. French further complicates matters by calling one of the principal varieties of Cichorium chicorés sauvage, literally wild chicory, but it doesn't necessarily mean that the plant grows wild. It may or it may not, so that you can have wild wild chicory or cultivated wild chicory, though for the sake of precision the latter is sometimes described as chicorée sau*toree,* improved wild chicary." It might be natural to assume that chicoree des jerdins, garden chicory, would mean cultivated chicory, especially as it is also called chicorée cultivée, But this would be an error too. Once again, it identifies a variety, which may turn up either wild or cultivated.

The cultivation of both chicory and endive is almost a European monopoly, particularly of Belgium, France, Germany and the Netherlands. In America, C. intubus is comparatively rare, except wild. And if you see it on a menu at all, it will probably a memi at all, it will probably

Herstatt Plan By Gerling Seen Failing

COLOGNE Nov. 4 (AP-DJ) ---Banking sources today rated as alim the chances for success of insurance magnate Hans Gerling's suggestion for compensation of Bankhaus I.D. Herstatt credi-

The sources said there is serious doubt that West German banks will be willing to play the compensation role foreseen for them by Mr. Gerling. In addition, credftors are hostile to the Gerling plan and contend it threatens efforts to work out a voluntary

Mr. Gerling, owner of the Gerling insurance group and 914-per-cent shareholder in the collapsed Bankhaus Herstatt, made his proposal in private last week, but details leaked out over the weekend. Mr. Gerling offered the sug-gestion as an alternative to the compensation scheme presented on Oct. 9 by neutral mediator Guenter Vogelsang.

The Gerling plan would offer the same compensation quotes to Herstatt creditors as envisioned by Mr. Vogelsang—45 per cent to domestic banks, 55 per cent to foreign banks and West German community governments, and 65 per cent to other large depositors. However, Mr. Gerling's contribution to the program would be reduced and he would not pay immediately but in instalments spread over 25 months.

As under the Vogelsang propos-German banks would contribute 115 million marks. The Gerling contribution to the compensation process, under his plan, would be "up to 200 million marks," including 23.6 million marks he has already paid out in hardship cases. Thus his new contribution would be a maximum 1764 million marks, down from the 210 million foreseen by

Mr. Vogelsang. Initial reaction from creditors, as well as from bankers, was negative. The Creditors Advisory Committee was quoted in a press report as terming the offer an

Sugar futures were all trading with limits-up restrictions. Under new London Terminal Market rules, the limit was set at £20 over Friday's official midday closing. This put March futures at $2474.50 a long ton, or 49.63 cents

Some of the morning flurry was caused by reports that Hun-gary—whose beet crop was practically destroyed by recent rains and floods—bought white sugar in Western Europe for around £565 a metric ton free on rail. The metric ton is maller than the long ton used by London dealers.

Market informants guessed the ugar was smuggled from Italy to Vuenslavia and then sold to Hungary. Italian dealers could not legally sell the sugar abroad because the Common Market is not granting export licenses for the commodity, which is scarce in KEC nations.

But London dealers said hierative smuggling has flourished lately—mostly from Italy to East-ern Europe or North Africa. The commodity has also been surg-gled in small boats during the night from Sicily to North

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4 (AP), next day, Mr. Carter said, "Our The Ford administration has quietly started backing off from former President Richard Nixon's orders to lease 10 million offshore scres a year for oil and development, starting in

Last January, Interior Secretary Rogers Morton talked of leasing "10 million acres a year for a couple of years."

Last Friday, in an exclusive interview, Mr. Morton said that goal spurred preparations for ined leasing, but "I'm not aiming today at 10 million acres. I'm siming to find out where the off is, and where it is not." Deputy Under Secretary Jared Carter also declined in a recent interview to stand by the 10million-acre goal.

Their caution contrasts sharply with Mr. Nixon's unmistakable command, expressed in an energy age to Congress last Jan. 23: "Today I am directing the Secretary of the Interior to increase the acreage leased on the outer continental shelf to 10 million acres beginning in 1975, more than tripling what had originally been planned.

Leases Ordered

Only last August, Mr. Carter sent a memo on behalf of Under Secretary John Whitaker, ordering preparations for "10 million acres leased in 1975, not just 10 million acres offered."

But when Mr. Morton was asked, last Sept. 16, if the policy was still to lease 10 million acres a year for three or four years he said it was the 1975 goal but not a mandatory amount. It may be that we can select diverse, raises the price per 1,000 cubic that very attractive tracts . . . that would result in more efficient use of exploratory rigs available," Mr. Morton said. Asked the same question on the goal is to find, not lease acres. So we will try to get into the best areas first."

What happened between the bold determination of mid-August and the sudden caution of mid-September? One thing was the publication of a report by the National Petroleum Council, an industry-government advisory group.

That report said there would not be enough drilling rigs, tu-bular steel, or skilled manpower to explore and develop five million acres a year, let alone 10. Asked if there are enough drilling rigs for 10 million new offshore acres in 1975, Mr. Carter to say with certainty that rigs will be available or not available. To hold back leasing now does not get on with the job." The goal of leasing now clearly has changed from an expectation of rapid development of untouched "frontier areas" off the Atlantic, Pacific and Alaskan coasts, to the hope that they can, at least, be explored.

Early new production now seems more likely in the Gulf of Mexico, already well explored and highly developed. "The goals for the Gulf of Mexico are realistic," Mr. Morton

In the latest interview, Mr. Morton was more explicit: "If we decide to go with the frontier areas, it should be in a way that we find out where the ofl is, and where it is not. And in the meantime, I think we ought to continue in the known structure areas and in the Gulf of Mexico . . . we should move to what the marketplace can absorb."

CNA Backs New Loeus Offer

CNA Pinancial Corp.'s board has voted unanimously to recommend that stockholders accept a revised tender offer by Loews Corp. at reduced prices. Under the new terms, Loews would pay $5 a share for CNA common, compared with the $6 proposed earlier, and $6.75 for the preferred instead of the previous $8. The offer continues to be conditioned on the tender of at least 20 million shares, which would give Loews control of CNA. The revised version also obligates Loews to purchase directly from CNA $25 million of a new series of CNA convertible preferred bearing an 80-cent annual dividend rate at the same $6.75 price. CNA's outstanding series "A" preferred pays a $1.10 dividend annually.

Trustee Sought for ITT's Levitt

The Justice Department is proposing that a trustee be named to carry out International Telephone & Telegraph Corp's required divestiture of Levitt & Sons Inc. Under a 1971 anti-trust consent decree, ITT was to have divested within three years either Hartford Fire Insurance Co. or else three other subsidiaries. FIT has aldy rid itself of one of the three subsidiaries -Hamilton Life Insurance Co.--but has not divested itself of two others, Levitt, the building firm, and Avis Inc., the car rental company. Thomas Kauper, who heads the anti-trust division, said the order proposed by the Justice Department would empower the trustee to restructure Levitt as an operating company capable of being disposed of by means of a spinoff to or an exchange with ITT's shareholders, a private sale or public offering.

British Auto Exports Rise

British auto industry exports in September rose to £141.1 million from £109.3 million a year earlier, while imports rose to £64.8 million from $55.7 million, giving the country a £76.3 million trade surplus in this sector. Although September's auto industry trade surplus was 41 per cent above the year earlier figure of £54.2 million, the surplus was the smallest for any month since February. The Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders, which issues the statistics, said auto industry exports in the first nine months of this year rose to £1.343 billion, up 15 per cent from £1.171 billion a year earlier. Imports totaled £580.7 million, up only 1 per cent from £576.7 million in the first nine months of 1973. Britain's auto industry surplus through September rose to £762.1 million, up 28 per cent from £594.4 million in the first nine months of 1973. The industry is expected to have a record trade surplus of about £1 billion for all 1974. Nearly all the increase in exports has been due to higher costs.

Teijin Expects New Profit Decline

Teijin Ltd. says its net profit is likely to drop to 2 billion yen ($6 million) in the half year ending March 31 from 6.5 billion yen in the preceding term. Vice-president Tomoo Tikusue told a press conference the company will cut its dividend for the period to 3.50 year from 3.75. He said the company, which lest Friday reported a 19-per-cent fall in net profit for the six months to end September, i. cutting production of nylon by 40 per cent and polyester 30 per cent. We (Help) Change Lives

Normally, when an executive or professional changes jobs, he merely increases his income a bit and moves up a notch in the corporate maze. We often question whether this kind of job change means too much.

Often a lot more ground can be covered a lot faster if a man makes a basic change in his corporate atmosphere or finds

GUILTY PLEASURES

By Donald Barthelme. Farrar, Straus & Giroux. 165 pp. $79:

Reviewed by Walter Clemons

64 ARE you doing anything now," an affable fellowfriendliest interest, "or are you still just writing?" Donald Barthelme grew up down there too and no doubt learned to field that query in the land where the bluebonnets grow. I wonder how he feels when the same question turns up now in reviews of his work; how he felt, for instance, when one of his profoundest funniest and most personal stories. "Daumier"—it happens to take piace on a Texas prairie was generally dismissed by reviewers of his last book. "Just writing" is the main sus-picion lodged against him. I sometimes mutter it myself, when I can't quite see what he's up to.

"Guilty Pleasures" is Barthelme's easiest book and a handy introduction for those who may have resisted or dodged him. It's rather oddly announced as his first book of nonfliction, but I think I see what's meant. Parody, table, collage and the Homeric catalogue of cultural detritus are the weaponry of Barthelme's fictions: they are deployed there in dizzying com-binations and substituted for one another without warning. Here the categories are distinct and the occasions clearly defined. Barthelme, over-modestly in some cases, seems to regard these pieces as his mere journalism.

"One always apologizes for writing parodies." he says—though Beeroohm didn't, and Barthelme's are as good; "it is a disreputable activity, ranking only a little higher than plagiarism." His Mrs. Miniver Rose in this line of work is "The Teachings of Don B.: A Yankee Way of Knowledge," in which he amiably and gently deep-sixes the works of Carlos Castaneda. "L'Lapse is an ingenious double parody of twosolemnities—a course in film criticism and an Antonioni screen-play, complete with such camera angles as " Medium shot of tree branches afflicted with Memling's

Rams vs. 49ers

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 4 (AF). -Two out of three streaks will be working against the San Francisco agers in their game against the Los Angeles Rams tonight.

Coach Dick Nolan's team has lost five straight games since opening the season with two victories, and the Rams have beaten the 49ers in the last eight regular-season meetings between the National Football Conference

But the 49ers will have the home field advantage, and all seven previous NFL Monday-night games this year have been won by the home team.

Two young quarterbacks, Tom Owen of the 49ers and James Harris of the Rams, will be start-ing. Owen, a rookle from Wichita State, made his first NFL start last week and the team had its best offensive game, with 372 yards in a 35-24 loss to Oakland.

Harris made his first start for the Rams two weeks ago and had a sensational day in a 37-14 victory over the 49ers. In his second start, Harris completed only six passes in a 20-13 victory over the New York Jets. The Rams are now 5-2.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4 (NYT) .- in the front office. Sten Musical Henry Aaron is going home to Milwankee where his heart is. It isn't in Atlanta anymore.

"You live and you learn," he was saying when the Milwaukee Brewers were negotiating to obtein him from the Atlanta Braves for Dave May and a minorleague player to be named later. "But when we began having meetings late in the season, they started talking about how they wanted me to work with the LaSalie Corporation as an ambassador for their sporting-goods division."

Bill Bartholomay, the Braves'

chairman, and Dan Donohue, the club president, are connected with the LaSalle Corp., a Chicago-based conglomerate that owns the Braves. "They just wanted me to shake

A Look at the College Bowl-Game Candidates

But there are two weeks remaining before the announce

If the Heisman Trophy vote took place today, Archie Griffin would probably win hands down. The three remaining games on Ohio State's schedule should do nothing to prevent the Buckeyes star back from becoming the first junior to win the trophy since player-of-the-year award in 1963. After Ohio State set a Buckeye record of 644 yards on offense, and Griffin picked up 144 of it on the ground, in Ohio State's 49-7 victory over Illinois, coach Woody Hayes said, "There's nobody close to Griffin for the Heisman Trophy." Griffin became the first major college player to pick up 100 or more yards in each of 18 consecutive games. Bob Blackman, the Illini coach, said, "I don't think there's ever been a team with so many offensive weapons." Unless the un-defeated and untied Michigan Wolverines can stop the Buckeyes on Nov. 23, it seems certain that undefeated and untied Ohio State will go to the Rose Bowl.

Auburn's Defeat

A big surprise changed the thinking in the other major bowl situations as Florida handed Auburn its first defeat of the year, 25-14. Penn State looked like its usual bowl teams with opportunistic defense that beat Maryland, the Lions' most difficult foe to date, 24-17. The Gators and the Nittany Lions have lost a game each and should become the highest ranked teams other than Alabama and Notre Dame to be eligible for the Orange and Sugar Bowls. Each of these bowls has extended an offer of over half a million dol-lars to both the Irish and Crimson Tide for a rematch of their Sugar Bowl game last winter.

But the Irish didn't perform much like a bowl team as they fought hard to get away with a 14-6 victory over Navy. Nevertheless, Tom Clements, Notre Dame's quarterback, set an Irish career total offense record of 4,155 yards. His 129 yards against Navy enabled him to break the old mark of 4,111 yards set by George Gipp, one of the most famous of Knute Rockne's backs in the 1920s. Alabama remained undefeated and untied with a 35-0 victory over Mississippi State. It may be coach Paul (Be who dictates the bowl site if his team again meets Notre Dame, because the Crimson Tide has the perfect record while Notre Dame has a loss.

Maureen Dean-'I'm Not Dealing With It Very Well'

By Marlene Cimons

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—It takes about one hour to drive from Washington to Ft. Holabird in Baltimore. It is a trip that Maureen Dean has made many times in the past two months to sit in a tiny barren room with her husband.

It is there that former White House counsel John Wesley Dean 3d, 35, a witness for the government in the Watergate coverup trial, is serving a one-to-four-year prison term for obstruction of justice. They exchange small talk-about books, about their new house in Los Angeles. They rarely, if ever, discuss Watergate. They are never alone. A U.S. marshal always witnesses their meetings.

"I had become terribly dependent on John," Mrs. Dean said last weekend before she flew back to California today. "We shared everything. Our thoughts were one. We were like one person. We were together 24 hours a day.
"Now, I hardly see him. It's just visits. We can barely hold hands. I just can't get used to it. And I'm so afraid I'm not dealing with it very well."

Maureen-or Mo, as she likes to be called-was sitting in the living room of a friend's house in Virginia, not too far from where she lived when her husband worked in the White House. She stayed there during the two weeks of Dean's testimony in the Watergate coverup trial, taking advantage of every opportunity to see him, showing up almost every day in the federal courthouse. Because he was a witness, and a federal prisoner, she was not allowed to so near

"That was painful, to be that close . . ." she said.
Mrs. Dean, who was 29 on Oct. 10, is much warmer in person than photographs suggest. She is also very shy. She says she has been through a strenuous time; the tension was increased not only by Dean's imprisonment but by her mother's ill health and a lawsuit her California neighbors have filed against her.

"There is a structure over our garage—which is now an apart-ment and which eventually will be John's office—that our neighbors want us to get rid of," she said. "To do that, we'd have to slice off the top of the garage. It's so dumb. It makes no sense to me why they would want to sue us. It's just one more headache we really don't need."

She wore a simple bright-green knit dress and gold button ear-rings; her dark, blonde-streaked hair was drawn into a bun at the nape of her neck in the style that became familiar to viewers of the televised Senate Watergate hearings two summers ago. Then, however, it was long and platinum-colored.

"I changed it because I couldn't go anywhere without people recognizing me," she said. "So I cut it and changed the color." She laughed. "And people recognized me anyway."

She smoked one cigarette after another and sipped rose wine from a huge goblet filled with ice cubes. A friend set nearby, and Mrs. Dean's year-old toy poodle, Gucci ("because he chews shoes"). frolicked on the sofa. A radio played rock music in the background, interrupted only once by a news broadcast. The lead item was about the illness of former President Nixon.

Asked if she would like to see the former President testify at the Watergate coverup trial, Mrs. Dean said, "I would love it, of course. I don't want him to be ill. I wouldn't wish that on anybody."

Mrs. Dean's last public statement, made through a friend in Washington, came the day after President Ford issued a pardon to the former chief executive. "I did not ask for any special favor for my husband," she said. "I simply said it was unfair that those who had told the truth were in jail, and Mr. Nixon didn't even have to pay the price of truth for his pardon. I was terribly disappointed that Mr. Ford's pen ran out of ink." Her face hardened. "We just want Mr. Nixon to tell the truth,"

she said. "We want him to tell the American people what happened and why it happened. It's the minimum he owes to Americansand to those who supported and worked for him." Mrs. Dean is writing a book now which she hopes will be out sometime this spring. Bentam Books will publish the soft-cover

The Deans were married in October, 1972. The pressures of the past two years have worked to strengthen their relationship, Mrs. "Adversity can work both ways," she added. "In our case, it worked for the best."

When she is in Washington, she tries to keep occupied. She works on the book, spends time with friends, visits her husband. She is worried about the effect Dean's imprisonment has had her mother and on Dean's 6-year-old son from an earlier marriage. "My mother adores John," she said. "She won't listen to any-one else. She feels safe when he is around—the fact that he is gone now has thrown her into a deep depression." Dean has not seen his son, John Dean 4th, since he surrendered to federal officials in September. "It's very sad," Mrs. Dean said. Johnny knows what's going on. It's traumatic.

"He loves his father very much, but isn't able to see him. They just don't know whether it would be all right or not, what effect it would have on him. So he hasn't seen him yet. Karla (Dean's first wife, the former Karla Hennings) has done a wonderful job with him, but a little boy needs a father."

Dean, she said, is healthy and in good spirits. "He has been so busy," she said. "John has a great ability to occupy his time. He reads most of the time. There are many things he wants to read and whenever I see him, he's telling me about everything he's

Mrs. Dean has worked as an airline stewardess, a Los Angeles bank employee and an advance woman for a federal study commission. In Washington, she worked as an executive aide to the director of the National Committee on Marijuana and Drug Abuse. Her first marriage was to Michael Biner of Los Angeles. Not long after the couple separated. Biner was killed in an automobile She is not comfortable with her sudden fame. People stop her in the street, on airplanes, everywhere, to ask about her husband.

"I've never had anyone say anything negative," she said. "But whenever people approach me, I get very embarrassed."

Perhaps the most significant result of these very rough days, she said, is that she is beginning to think of herself as a whole, complete person. "B's been a maturing experience for me," she said.
"I'm learning again to live on my own. To be independent. And to be my own best friend. It's a slow process. But it's working." @ Los Angeles Times.
